LOVE INSPIRES FRUITFUL EXISTENCE

Sometimes real sometimes fake
Life - is it really a cake?
Bond, Relationships, trust are different aspects
That give life a meaning and respect
Give meaning to your life
Add a bit of fun and spice
Live, travel, enjoy and play
Before tomorrow make a slay
Help people who are in need doesn't matter what's their caste and creed
Don't let your past disturb you
Your future scares you
Your present is in your hands
Be focused, decide and strive
Come out of your stressed shades
Live the fullest before life fails
Never let regrets come in your way
Give a perfect shot whatever it may
You are the director and writer of your presence

Don't let other decisions question your existence
Life isn't that hard as we blame it
It's just an outcome of the deeds we did
It's the reality of our unrealistic ideology
It depends on the way you see
The 'IF' in life or the or the gift that god had gave

JUST NOT A WORD

Honesty is just not a word.
It defines character of a person.
It defines interior purity.
It defines self's satisfaction.
And which is only being judged by our interior world.
Which combines with Hard work
Hard work defines focus.
It defines consistency.
It defines discipline.
And
Then word success arises
And success defines life achievement whether it will be small or big one.
Which totally depends on ourselves
Then the success is seen or judge by entire world.
Depending on us.
We are the only person who can define our success
So, be honest to ourselves and keep doing hard work
And definitely success will be in our feet.

GRAVEYARD OF DREAMS

I pass by a black painted hollow
Which smelled of prolonged sadness and sorrow
Unlike other graveyards, this one had a weird vibe about it
For like other graveyards, it did not fit
The usual ones contained tombstones
With the legendary time for which they shone
Yet I was surprised for what I had seen
All the cemeteries protrude a light, one of which was green
Intrigued by the strangeness of this place
I decide to walk in through the empty space
I've been to a lot of cemeteries
Yet this one was astonishing
For there were hundreds of lanes
Among thousands of graves
All of them emitting a colorful beam
I wander aimlessly on the grass beneath
And start reading the names of the people buried underneath
Bewildered, I look at it again
Doubting myself whether I had gone insane
The birth year gracefully shown
But the death year was yet to be known
I stop by a grave which reflected a light bright red
And began reading what it said
" Oh my heart, such pain you inflict in me
I wish someone was put upon earth to hear my plea
Another dream of mine crushed beneath their constraints
Now will I ever be able to fly a plane? "
I frowned and realized where I was
It was not a cemetery which contained various corpse
It was a graveyard. A graveyard of dreams.
I walk through different lanes
Glancing over different names

Each one carrying a different dream
Which has turned into silent screams
One dreams of touching the sky so high
The other dreams that his marriage would be accepted in the society for it is a Bi Crossing many lanes
I see a name so familiar
No surprise it was me deciding my own career
I stood transfixed to believe what I had seen
I was among the people who had shattered dreams
" Doctorate is surely a good field
But it certainly is not my cup of tea
Chided by my parents and family
Not to choose fashion as it is not manly. "
That is what it read
I fight back tears and heave a sigh
Looking at my hands; I cry
For my life has been a lie
These hands which now hold
Different equipments and tools
Were meant to hold needles, cloth and wool
Wiping my tears, I fake a smile
And walk towards the exist which seemed such a delight
As I walk, a dawning fact grasped me hard
That this graveyard was more melancholy
And that is why it leaves the others apart.

LOVE YOU TILL THE END

When your eyes will flood with tear face covered with mascara smear.
When your all energy will drain body, ache with pain.
I will hold your hand
Cos I'll love you till the end.
When your smile will walk away face lining will go astray.
When you won't able to laugh chin won't stretch enough.
I'll become clown and you'll get mend
Cos I'll love you till the end.
When your body will fail to respond your call legs, too weak to counter the fall.
When your all yours will abandon you eyesight, too weak to look through.
I'll support you to stand
Cos I'll love you till the end.
When you will momentarily stutter words will flutter.
When you'll get blank at stage
you'll face public rage.
I'll cover you to defend
Cos I'll love you till the end.
When you'll be locked up in cage feather will be ablaze.
When you'll lose all your hope you'll feel choked.
I'll be the savior and godsend
Cos I'll love you till the end.

When you'll be drowning in ocean of loneliness
When you won't able to take a breath.
When you'll alone to cherish your glory
When there won't be anyone to listen your story.
I'll always there like a best friend
Cos I'll love you till the end.
When your all memories will fade mind hide the reminiscence in dark shade.
When you'll forget every person
When you'll lose attention.
I'll always remind you to apprehend
Cos I'll love you till the end

FROM DELHI: JAIPUR, RAJASTHAN, 281 KMS, 5 HRS, 27 DEGREES

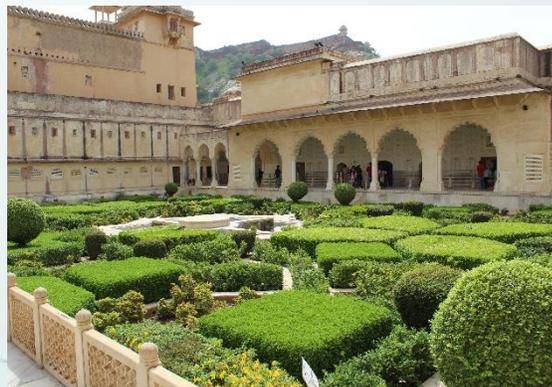

BEST BETS: Sight-seeing, shopping, desert safaris, wildlife

The city of Jaipur is in Rajasthan. It is known as the “Pink City” for its trademark building color. The old Jaipur painted in pink can grip any visitor with admiration. Jaipur is a known tourist destination that is famous for Majestic Forts. It is renowned world over for its cultural and architectural beauty. Your weekender break will be great fun here. Presenting a stunning backdrop of ancient forts including Amer, Nahargarh, Hawa Mahal witness the chivalry of the bygone era, that was celebrated with elan in Jaipur.

MUST-VISIT: HAWA MAHAL also called The Palace of Winds, is a fascinating landmark built by the orders of poet-king, Sawai Pratap Singh in the 18th Century. From behind the dark shadowed windows of Hawa Mahal (pictured below), high above the streets, the women could observe the city below without being observed themselves.

AMBER PALACE is one such Rajput palace located only about 11 kilometers from the center of Jaipur. The sand-colored walls of Amber Fort (pictured above) fade into the surrounding hillside in a nearly perfect disguise. This was the original capital of Rajasthan before Maharaja Jai Singh II relocated during his reign to the City Palace.

ALBERT HALL MUSEUM is the oldest museum of the state and functions as the State museum of Rajasthan. The building is situated in Ram Niwas garden outside the city wall opposite New gate. The museum has a rich collection of artefacts including paintings, carpets, ivory, stone, metal sculptures, and works in crystal. Apart from these you can visit Jal Mahal, City Palace, Jantar Mantar and more. Most of these destinations are a day trip, offering ample opportunities to shop as well at the local bazaars.

‘Dreams’ – Are something which are wished by many but achieved only by some. Some achieve it because they have everything to achieve it but they lack the belongingness to their dreams. And then there are those who want to achieve them, have that belongingness but lack the means to achieve them. But as we know it is rightly said- “Where there is a will, there is a way”- and the ones who understand this can do anything and achieve their dreams.

This story is about one such person named ‘Samira – a small town girl who aimed for the sky’. Samira belonged to a lower-middle class family and had a dream of becoming one of the world’s best athlete. She lived in a small town called Majuli, located in Assam and living in such a small town meant deprived of any means to achieve a big dream like hers. So, to pursue her dreams she decided to move to a big city like Delhi. Her decision to move to such a big city was not as easy as it seemed to be. She had her own hurdles on her way towards her journey. Her father was completely against her decision of going to Delhi. She tried her best to convince her father but failed. And these leads her to go against her father’s whims and move to Delhi. The only good thing happened was her mother, who always supported her. She finally moved to Delhi to start her journey towards her dreams. Delhi is one of the biggest metropolitan cities and her life in Delhi didn’t seem to be easy. She had her own plans, wanted to enroll herself in training centers and even found few best centers before going to Delhi. According to her everything was sorted – ‘training, trials and selection’. But alas, it was not easy for her as she imagined it to be. On one side, she had to face the hatred of her father for going against his whims and on the other side, she had her own struggle in training. She found many training centers and decided to give trials for them. She gave her trials but had to face the discrimination, the mocking and what not? Since she was from a north-east state she had to face nasty comments. These comments not only made her feel like an outsider in her own country but also made her feel low in her trials. But besides so many mocking and discrimination she didn’t let her spark fade away. She gave her best once, twice, thrice and one day she finally made it to one of the biggest training centers for athletes in India. Not only the best center but she even got the best coach who not only trained her but also guided and helped her to be the best version of herself. Besides getting tips for being a good athlete, she also learnt the life lessons from her own coach, who too had been through his own ups and downs and she decided that not even the smallest obstacle could stop her. The trials for Asian Games arrived and she wanted to make the most of the opportunity. She sweated blood for one week to make herself strong enough to face the trials. Finally, the day of the trials came, and she wished to give her best. She went for the trials and did whatever she could do to pass them. Besides knowing the fact that the team was already full and only one more athlete was required. She didn’t lose hope and waited for the results. Soon the results were out and she successfully got the place in team for the Games. She was almost near her goal but the fact that her father wouldn’t come for her games irked her. After so many months of struggle she still couldn’t convince her father. Soon the day of the Asian Games finals arrived. While she was headed towards the ground, suddenly the least thing she could expect happened. She saw her father on the ground cheering her name aloud proudly. This not only boosted her but gave her a sigh of relief that now she could face it without any fear or regrets. As she walked towards her path she could clearly hear her name being cheered aloud and realised her dream coming true. And this helped her to win a gold medal for the country and she proudly walked off the ground with India’s flag on one hand and a medal which she dedicated to her father.

Well, the story not only clearly defines the title but also shows that- ‘no matter what, if you can dream it, you can achieve it too’.

"SHE" IS IMPORTANT !!

Maybe Respecting the female gender is not mandatory but this etiquette should be in our blood because only a female has power to give birth by affording so much of pain. If boys will respect female, believe me it will not harm their health instead of it they will feel so good & amazing. A female spends her whole life serving a man in different roles like, Mother, sister, daughter, best friend and as a wife. A girl spends almost 20 years with her family & during that period one cannot imagine how much "she" would have memories stored in her heart with her family.

After getting married "she" leaves her birth place, her family, her dreams and her sir name too; she leaves almost everything and then she enters a new world and connects two families. And what male does with her is staring, abusing, misbehaving, and sometimes torturing her and not giving respect to her. I would like to say never forget one thing you too have mother, sister, daughter, best friend and wife too. When other men stare your mother, sister, daughter, best friend and wife and comment on them that time you feel very bad. So dear males be real men not only a man. Anybody can be normal, not everybody can be unique, so you should try. Maybe you will be a unique person and a real man. Respect women not because they are women, just because of you are a real man.

They are the most precious gift all men have because of kindness of god that is why all men should protect them, respect them when they need, care for them and men should make her feel special because she is your present and she is your future too. When she is alone she is not your opportunity rather she is your responsibility. Your caring and respecting nature makes you real men.

THE WEIGHT OF THE WATER

Once upon a time a psychology professor walked around on a stage while teaching stress management principles to an auditorium filled with students. As she raised a glass of water, everyone expected they'd be asked the typical "glass half empty or glass half full" question. Instead, with a smile on her face, the professor asked, "How heavy is this glass of water I'm holding?"

Students shouted out answers ranging from eight ounces to a couple pounds. She replied, "From my perspective, the absolute weight of this glass doesn't matter. It all depends on how long I hold it. If I hold it for a minute or two, it's fairly light. If I hold it for an hour straight, its weight might make my arm ache a little. If I hold it for a day straight, my arm will likely cramp up and feel completely numb and paralyzed, forcing me to drop the glass doesn't change, but the longer I hold it, the heavier it feels to me".

As the class shook their heads in agreement, she continued, "Your stresses and worries in life are very much like the glass of water. Think about them for a while and nothing happens. Think about them a bit longer and you begin to ache a little. Think about them all day long, and you will feel completely numb and paralyzed- incapable of doing anything else until you drop them."

The Moral:

It's important to remember to let go of your stresses and worries. No matter what happens during this day, as early in the evening as you can, put all your burdens down. Don't carry them through the night and into the next day with you. If you still feel the weight of yesterday's stress, it's a strong sign that it's time to put the glass down.

“PRIVACY IS DEAD, AND SOCIAL MEDIA HOLDS, THE SMOKING GUN.”

Social Networking has drastically changed the way people interact with their friends, associates and family members. Social media is how being a crucial part of human life, but is it safe?

User upload their pictures, personal details, the phone numbers and occupation etc. Uploading details on the server. Which is the vital area for hackers, where they target their victims. In the 21st century, information is the new currency you wouldn't just hand out your banking account information, so why would you give away your privacy right on social networking sites? Pay particular attention to what you are agreeing to share when you sign up or log into your account. For eg: According to facebook's statement of rights and responsibility any photos and videos shared by other user remains on the site after you deactivate your account.

Many sites push you to agree to terms that are best for them – not you. Take a moment to wade through any legalese. Some of it may exceed your personal comfort limit. Make sure your permission choices are right for you.

Let us consider this scenario:

Facebook is characterized as a social media website which combines features of e-mail, instant messaging , photo-sharing and blogging programs as well as a way to monitor one's friend online Activities , Facebook allow uses to craft their own profiles, link such profile together in a visible social and allows uses to communicate with one another in 2008, Facebook became the most popular website in the world in a social media platform. Thus, the corporation began to gather aggregate data through less obstructive means, so as resell that private information to the third-party advertisers.

Therefore, while communicating or using social websites one should not share their personal details. take it as your entertainment not as a part of life . getting addict to something is easy as compare to get away from it.

*“ I know that some are dubious
About this Facebook look
And twitter often leaves them cold
There is no linkedin spark
I've also heard it quoted
Interaction is by choice
And all this social media
Gives everyone a voice”*

Nowadays instead of using keyboard and mouse, the user interacts with a surface. Typically the surface is a touch-sensitive screen. It has been said that this more closely replicates the familiar hands-on experience of everyday object manipulation. Surface Computing is the use of a specialized computer GUI in which traditional GUI elements are replaced by intuitive, everyday objects. Early work in this area was done at the University of Toronto, Alias Research and MIT. This research includes the basic features, history, applications, advantages, disadvantages, working and structure of surface computing. The goal of surface computing is to recognize touch and objects on the screen's surface and to interact with those objects seamlessly.

There are 4 attributes: -

1. Direct interaction: means that, we can interact with the Surface by using our fingers.
2. Multi-touch: Surface computing recognizes many points of contact simultaneously; surface has been optimized to respond 52 touches at a time.
3. Multi-user: The horizontal form factor makes it easy for several people to gather around surface computers together, providing a collaborative, face to face computing experience.
4. Object recognition: Users can place physical objects on the surface to trigger different types of digital responses, including the transfer of digital content.

Surface computer was announced on May 29, 2007 at D5 conference. Preliminary launch was on April 17, 2008. The latest version is Microsoft Surface 2.0.

It consists of 4 parts:-

1. Screen: A diffuser turns the Surface's acrylic table top into a large horizontal multi-touch screen, capable of processing multiple inputs from multiple users.
2. Infrared: Surface's 'machine vision' operates in the near infrared spectrum, using an 850-nanometer-wavelength LED light source aimed at the screen.
3. CPU: Surface uses many of the same components found in everyday desktop computers.
4. Projector: Microsoft's Surface uses the DLP (Digital Light Processing) light engine found in many rear projections DTV's.

The applications of surface computing are: Digital photo handling with finger tips, instantly compares while shopping, interaction with digital content by share, drag and drop, digital images, Surface Restaurant, quickly browse through play list entries dragging favourite song to the current track, easy to take complex shopping decisions. It is not simply a touch screen, but more of a touch-grab-move slide resize-and-place-objects-on-top-of- screen, and this open up new possibilities that weren't before

Earlier it was - 'A COMPUTER ON EVERY DESKTOP' Now we say, 'EVERY DESKTOP WILL BE A COMPUTER.'

Ahlan wa sahan. That was one of the first phrases I learnt in Arabic, It is an old Arabic phrase that means, we welcome you.

At the airport, I could hear as much Hindi as Arabic, and I didn't realize then that with the Bahraini stamp on my passport, I was being welcomed as much into the hearts, homes and lives of the Bahraini people, as I was into the borders of (evidently) the most liberal country in the Gulf region.

In my 6 weeks experience, I have been overwhelmed by the camaraderie I've developed with the local people, inspired by the spirit of Bahraini women and men, and touched by the patriotic sentiment that seems to flow (almost) throughout the country. To say that I've fallen in love will be an understatement. Going there for the internship will be one of the experiences in life that I would never want to forget. I had to live with people of my age from all over the world. Before meeting I was nervous but excited at the same time of how I'll manage to live with them. Different culture, different lifestyle. But as we all started living together we became a family. We worked on the Women Empowerment project together. Preparing the Questionnaire, doing the surveys. Conducting an Open Lecture in AMA International University was one of my biggest achievements there. It was a very different experience for me. It just made me a whole new person, different from how I was before going to Bahrain. The project we started was just a beginning but Bahrain needs to be more aware and I hope it continues thereon. Apart from the work, exploring the country was fun. Whenever I think of it I get so amazed that it is not even as big as Delhi. And so even the population is just about 14-15 lacs. But when I look at the currency (BD-Bahraini Dinar), its way more than the USD. There's a very famous place which is known as "Tree of life". Its 400 years old in between of a desert with no water supply still so healthy. It has seen the history and still survived so the dramatic name. It actually gives me hope. A hope that whatever happens, if you're willing to do it, no one can stop you. Another favorite place of mine was the "Manama Souk". It's the local market that is called in Arabic. It has such beautiful houses and library. Oh and how can I forget the Arabic lessons which we were taught on every Fridays? Also it will be of no use of penning down my experience if I don't talk about the delicious food I was served with. From Shewarma to Maghloom, Baklava to Falafel. Food makes everyone happy and so it made me happy too when once in a blue moon I felt homesick. There have been so many places which gave me peace and an adrenaline rush sometimes. Just like sitting all day long at the Aldar Islands watching the sunset. Feeling like sun just went into the water and will shine again the next morning. Making me feel like every day is a new day which is true obviously. Or sitting beside the pool on my rooftop there with a view of Al fateh Mosque. Biggest in Bahrain. Telling me god is everywhere. One god many beliefs. On the other side, going for the carting or gravity hole giving me a whole different experience. That rush and thrill you feel. The acclaimed Bahrain National Museum showcases artifacts from the ancient Dilmun civilization that flourished in the region for millennia. The city's thriving Bab al-Bahrain bazaar offering wares ranging from colorful hand-woven fabrics and spices to pearls. The Bahrain National Fort looks as pretty as a picture and no second thoughts on why it is registered under UNESCO! I know one thing for sure; this trip wouldn't have been this amazing without the loving family I made there. Sometimes after coming back here, I feel like I left my heart there to my extended family in Bahrain. And I so hope all of us reunite again. As it is said, a flat becomes home when you have your people in it. This is what I felt when I met 'my people' there.

THE OBSTACLE IN OUR PATH

There once was a very wealthy and curious king. This king had a huge boulder placed in the middle of a road. Then he hid nearby to see if anyone would try to remove the gigantic rock from the road.

The first people to pass by were some of the king's wealthiest merchants and courtiers. Rather than moving it, they simply walked around it. A few loudly blamed the King for not maintaining the roads. Not one of them tried to move the boulder.

Finally, a peasant came along. His arms were full of vegetables. When he got near the boulder, rather than simply walking around it as the others had, the peasant put down his load and tried to move the stone to the side of the road. It took a lot of effort, but he finally succeeded.

The peasant gathered up his load and was ready to go on his way when he saw a purse lying in the road where the boulder had been. The peasant opened the purse. The purse was stuffed full of gold coins and a note from the king. The king's note said the purse's gold was a reward for moving the boulder from the road.

The king showed the peasant what many of us never understand: every obstacle presents an opportunity to improve our condition

The algorithm works on the field of ant colony optimization which is a vast area in swarm intelligence that is widespread for solving complex problems of information technology. The algorithm selects optimum route by keeping optimum time and optimum distance as major parameters and solves the principles of optimum path routing.

2. Dr. Pooja Sharma

Dr. Pooja Sharma has published research paper in PAN IIT Roorkee conference. Her paper focused on the impact of digital employees on HRM, in relation to prosperous or disastrous changes to the workforce, to HRM in general and more concretely to the use of technology in updating HRM activities. Based on this, the strategic and operative adaptation of HRM to a changing workforce constitutes a step necessary to support organizations further on. In this way, “digital employees” constitutes a first notable area of digital changes and challenges of the HR profession. Digitalization has become a need of organization but Digital Employees prove prosperous for the organization to a certain limit only as digitalization stops creativity and reduces mental exercise.
